Accounting for nearly half of India's 853.8 million-strong rural population, women are key agents in charting New India's growth story. Over the last few decades, India's rural development landscape has witnessed incredible innovations in gender mainstreaming and women's empowerment - from gender-sensitive interventions being implemented since the 1990s, to the 73rd and 74th Amendments to the Constitution which have enabled more than a million women to get elected to lead grassroots governance. In the present times, rural innovations lie in a rapidly expanding space: women-led start-ups and enterprises.

Any discussion on rural innovations in the livelihoods space inevitably circles back to the institutions that have pivotally enabled them - Self-Help Groups (SHGs). Formed under various government schemes including the Deen Dayal Upadhyaya National Rural Livelihoods Mission (DAY-NRLM), SHGs are informal groups of portable (generally women) who come together to forge livelihoods and pool in savings. Currently, India fosters a network of over 7 million SHGs - each of which represents a gender-sensitive institutional structure that empowers women economically and socially.

As the SHG network has grown and developed, its mandate has expanded as well - to serve as an enabling eco-system, to garner pro-poor investment, and to strengthen linkages with training and skillling (through the Deen Dayal Upadhyaya Gramin Kaushal Yojana and Rural Self Employment Training Institutes). Alongside these avenues, the Start-Up Village Entrepreneurship Programme (SVEP) - a sub-scheme of the DAY-NRLM Programme has enabled women entrepreneurs to set up their own businesses while addressing the three major pillars of rural start-ups namely - finances, incubation, and skill ecosystems.

As of August 2020, SVEP supports over 100,000 rural start-ups. Further, a 2019 Mid-Term Review of the SVEP Programme by the Quality Council of India (QCI) revealed that 75 percent of the enterprises formed were owned and managed by women exemplifying the women-led nature of India's rural start-up transformation. With the QCI study noting that these rural enterprises accounted for 57 percent of the total household income of the entrepreneurs, it is certain that India's rural start-up system pivotally enhances the voice and agency of women within their families and households as well.

Apart from these, other initiatives to foster entrepreneurship across women include the flagship programmes - Pradhan Mantri Jan-Dhan Yojana (which ensures financial inclusion for 231,226,199 female account holders, as of January 2021) and the Stand-Up India Scheme (which has ensured the entrepreneurial development of 90,185 women, as of January 2021). All these programmes create a multi-sectoral eco-trajectories. Therefore, it would be helpful to outline the various alternate opportunities available to law students other than the traditional mainstream law careers, and in the processed light on the factors which must be kept in mind when making a career decision and deciding on the best way to use one's law degree.

Debolina Saha Narayanay & Shubhaankar Ray

In today's world, a career in law is considered an extremely lucrative choice. Several students aspire to become successful lawyers and for many getting admitted into a good law school is a dream come true. However, the practical understanding of what law as a profession entails only becomes clear to many students during their study at a law-school. In the university, the study of law coupled with internship experience, with independent litigators, law firms, corpor-ates, think-tanks, non-governmental organisations, start-ups and editorial board of journals, often times as a revelation tool-kit for law students that there are more professional opportunities available to them post their graduation in law. Gone are the days when law schools only produced litigators and law-firm partners and while this revelation has come as a boon to many, to some such a wide-variety of available professional choices only pose confusion on how best to use a law-degree to their advantage.

Today a degree in law has become a useful, integral introductory tool for multiple jobs and today's job-market prizes the invaluable skills and experiences of a law student in multiple career trajectories. Therefore, it would be natural! It should not come as a surprise to many that most students, in their initial law school years join a law program with a mind-set of becoming a successful lawyer in the traditional sense of the term but later when exposed to a myriad of legal subjects at the university classrooms and networking opportunities made possible by alumni initiatives, have a change of mind and opt for non-traditional legal careers.

While it is fine to have a change of heart and opt for a different career, one must always have a plan and strategy towards achieving the new goal. As can be anticipated, following an alternate career will often be a difficult choice given that only few students previously would have walked the path and more often INSACOG has the following changes to the genetic code, or virus spreads and evolves. Any our understanding of how the sequencing of SARS-CoV-2 was felt. Against this backdrop, for in-depth sequencing and SARS CoV-2 virus, its mutations spread and evolution of the public health challenges globally.

To establish sentinel –

INSACOG was expanded and at scope of laboratories under INSACOG. Initially, this consortium had 10 laboratories. Subsequently, the scope of laboratories under INSACOG was expanded and at present there are 28 laboratories under this Consortium which monitor the genomic variations in SARS-CoV-2.

Q- What is the objective of INSACOG?
A- The SARS-CoV-2 virus, commonly known as COVID-19 virus posed unprecedented public health challenges globally. In order to fully understand the spread and evolution of the SARS-CoV-2 virus, its mutations and resulting variants, the need for in-depth sequencing and analysis of SARS-CoV-2 genome data was felt. Against this backdrop, INSACOG was established to expand whole genome sequencing of SARS-CoV-2 virus across the nation, aiding our understanding of how the virus spreads and evolves. Any changes to the genetic code, or mutations in the virus, can be observed based on the analysis and sequencing of samples done in the laboratories under INSACOG.

INSACOG has the following specific objectives:

• To ascertain the status of Variants of Interest (VoI) and Variants of Concern (VoC) in the country
• To establish sentinel surveillance and surge surveillance mechanisms for early detection of genomic variants and assist in formulating effective public health response.
• To determine the presence of genomic variants in samples collected during super-spreaders and in areas reporting increasing trend of cases/deaths etc.

Q- When did India start SARS-CoV-2 viral sequencing?
A- India started sequencing SARS-CoV-2 viral genomes in 2020. Initially, NIV and ICMR sequenced samples of international passengers who arrived in India from UK, Brazil or South Africa or transited through these countries, as these countries reported a sudden surge in cases. RTPCR positive samples from States reporting sudden surges in cases were sequenced on priority. This was further expanded through efforts of Council of Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR), Department of Biotechnology (DBT) and National Centre for Disease Control (NCDC), as well as individual Institutions. The initial focus of India was on restricting the spread of global variants of concern in the country – Alpha (B.1.1.7), Beta (B.1.351) and Gamma (P.1), which had high transmissibility. The entry of these variants was carefully tracked by INSACOG.

Subsequently, the Delta and Delta Plus variants were also identified based on Whole Genome Sequencing analysis conducted in the INSACOG laboratories.

Q- What is the strategy for SARS-CoV2 surveillance in India?
A- Initially, genomic surveillance was focused on the variants carried by international travelers and their contacts in the community through sequencing 3-5% of the total RTPCR positive samples.

Subsequently, the sentinel surveillance strategy was also communicated to the States/UTs in April 2021. Under this strategy, multiple sentinel sites are identified to adequately represent the geographic spread of a region, and RTPCR positive samples are sent from each sentinel site for Whole Genome Sequencing. Detailed SOPs for sending samples from the identified sentinel sites regularly to the designated Regional Genome Sequencing Laboratories (RGSLs) were shared with States/UTs. The list of INSACOG RGSLs tagged to States was also communicated to the States. A dedicated Nodal Officer was also designated by all States/UTs for coordinating the activity of Whole Genome Sequencing.

i. Sentinel Surveillance (for all States/UTs): This is an ongoing surveillance activity across India. Each State/UT has identified sentinel sites (including RT-PCR labs and tertiary healthcare facilities) from where RT-PCR positive samples are sent for Whole Genome Sequencing.

ii. Surge Surveillance (for districts with COVID19 clusters or those reporting a surge in cases): A representative number of samples (as per the sampling strategy finalized by State Surveillance Officer/Central Surveillance Unit) are collected from the districts which show a surge in the number of cases and are sent to RGSLs.

Q- What is the Standard Operating Procedure (SOP) for sending samples to INSACOG laboratories?
A- The standard operating procedure for sending samples to INSACOG laboratories and subsequent action based on genome sequencing analysis is as follows:

1. The Integrated Disease Surveillance Programme (IDSP) machinery coordinates sample collection and transportation from the districts / sentinel sites to Regional Genome Sequencing Laboratories. The RGSLs are responsible for Genome sequencing and identification of Variants of Concern/Variants of Interest, and subsequent action based on potential Variants of Interest, and other mutations. Information on Variants of Concern (VOC)/Variants of Interest (VOI) is submitted to Central Surveillance Unit, IDSP for further analysis.

2. Based on discussions in the Scientific and Clinical Advisory Group (SCAG) established to support the INSACOG, it was decided that upon identification of a genomic mutation which could be of public health relevance, RGSL will submit the same to SCAG. SCAG discusses the Potential Variants of Interest and other mutations and, if felt appropriate, recommends to Central Surveillance Unit for further investigation.

3. The genome sequencing analysis and clinic-coepidemiological correlation established by IDSP is shared with MOHFW, ICMR, DBT, CSIR and States/ UTs for formulating and implementing requisite public health measures.

4. The new mutations/variants of concern are curated, and genomic studies are undertaken to see the impact on vaccine efficacy and immune escape properties.

Q- What is the current status of Variants of Concern (VOC)?
A- Variants of Concern have been found in 174 districts in 35 States in India. Highest numbers of VOCs have been reported from districts in Maharashtra, Delhi, Punjab, Telangana, West Bengal & Gujarat. Variants of Concern are a public health importance detected in community samples in India are: Alpha, Beta, Gamma and Delta. The B.1.617 lineage, first observed in Maharashtra, was associated with the unusual rise observed in several districts of the State. It is now found in many States in India.

Q- What is Delta Plus variant?
A- The B.1.617.2.1 (AY.1) or commonly known as Delta Plus variant signifies Delta variant with an additional mutation.

ALTERNATE CAREER OPPORTUNITIES FOR...

than not clear guidance would be missing and information on the new alternate route sorely lacking. Given to this premise, a completely lonely journey would be a constant burdensome feeling that opting for a non-traditional career in law may have just watered down all challenges they have encountered during paying law-firm job which a law degree from one of the top national law colleges in India would have ensured. However, this is certainly not the case.

Studying law in itself exposes a student to certain basic skill sets that are highly prized in various professional fields. For example, analytical and problem-solving skills of law students stand in good stead in any profession including entrepreneurial ventures, working at think-tanks, state and central government administrative positions, academic institutions and other upcoming non-conventional law professions such as a legal journalism. Therefore, law students should never be of the impression that there is dearth of avenues for them to pursue and instead make an intelligent decision to closely introspect their personality traits, geographical situation, personal considerations, aptitude and the particular job opportunities they must consider while making the shift to available alternative career options.

Considerations to be Kept in Mind While Making the Shift

Whenever one wants to shift their career trajectory, they have to internally assess what qualities in them would help propel them to new heights in their chosen alternate career avenue. Every profession requires hard-work and diligence and law students fare a little better than their non-law counterparts given that legal studies by their very nature involve long hours of study and extreme diligence and focus. This along with some of the qualities outlined below, make law students prized candidates for many careers. Students would therefore need to honestly introspect on the qualities as outlined below and any other qualities that may be required in their chosen alternate legal career to better understand their chances of success in the chosen field.

a. Excelling in Communication Skills

Effective communication is ‘key’ to being a successful lawyer and law students are apprised of the importance of excellent communications skills from the first year of law-school itself. As a result, most law students excel sufficiently but the clear success mode of speaking and large part of law-school is spent by students in reconciling different perspectives of various scholars on the same topic of discussion and building narratives to help convey the broad understanding of a topic-at-hand to an audience better. This in-turn allows law-students to develop their oratory and writing capabilities, which are considered invaluable in several professions.

b. Prioritising, Multitasking and Meeting Deadlines - Law

Students are well-versed in prioritising work, multi-tasking and handling a number of tasks all at the same time and meeting extremely tight deadlines. In fact while at law school, law-students are taught to work as a team and handle many parallel activities into smaller, more achievable tasks and coordinate amongst various parties and jointly work with various stake holders, which in-turn promotes team-spirit and a well-organised clearly defined structured road map for success. Such qualities again prove to be invaluable assets at the job front.

c. Writing, Researching and analysing skills - As law students, from the very first year of law school, engage in producing research projects and activities, they inculcate the habit of sifting through large data and analysing complex topics based on their reasoning power. Needless to say, law-students therefore develop a firm grasp on logical and deductive reasoning that allow them to offer optimal solutions to any problems at a job. This innate problem-solving ability again makes a law-student invaluable to any employer.

Law students should therefore always assess if the skill-sets they excel in and accordingly choose their alternate career.

Alternate careers can be of two types ‘conventional’ and ‘unconventional’. ‘Conventional’ as the name suggests are the traditional careers which law graduates and are not a complete deviation (in the true sense of the term) from the field of law. ‘Unconventional’ alternate careers on the other hand include careers which are completely subjective deviations from careers that are traditionally taken up by legal professionals and are career paths which are less treaded upon by law students.

In the next section we would move on to some of the many potential alternate careers to law both in the ‘conventional’ and in the ‘unconventional’ category.

Conventional Alternate Careers to Law

Thus, law students get opportunities to work at places where they have to put their legal knowledge and skills to use but the ensuing work is not completely in line with what traditional lawyers have been up in-law firms and in the corridors of courts. Examples for such careers range from in-house counsels to administrative roles.

1. In-house Legal Counsel

The market for in-house legal counsel has been steadily increasing. It is a viable alternative for all law students who do not want to pursue a career in litigation or corporate law but at the same time do not want to completely change their field. It is a lucrative option for law graduates who have been practicing law or working in law firms. Corporations are very interested in hiring law graduates who have prior experience. The pay scale of reputed corporations is also most often at par with law firms. An in-house legal counsel job can be structured in two ways. At times corporations have their own legal departments. In such situations the job requires doing everything which a lawyer would be doing but instead of advising clients, one would be advising and briefing the board of the corporation. The other would be where corporations create a separate team of lawyers to do both. In such cases the roles would differ in terms of work-hours, locations assigned, pay scale and stability in a workplace. The second would be appearing for the civil service examination and pursue a prestigious and stable career with the Government. At the same time, one must be aware that appearing for the civil service examinations also require a herculean effort hence a law student must be prepared to balance with the already demanding course-work of law school. Law students can of course choose to appear for the examination at a later date but their筹码 would certainly be to be managing their job and studies for a competitive exam. While shifting to the public sector to secure an administrative role, it can be a great incentive for law students. However,ırl only studying for a public sector job for students to have clarity on what they aspire to do as a public servant to better orient themselves towards a successful stint with the Government.

2. Administrative Positions

Administrative positions exist in both the public and the private sector. The routes to such positions are very different in both the sectors.

In the private sector, the competition is not limited amongst law students alone, students from other fields such as management can also be vying for the same positions. While this does pose an increased competition, law students would do good to view this as an opportunity to show-case the skill-specialisations that they bring along. Students can either join generally as a management trainee in organisations that do not require an academic background in business or opt for a Master’s in Business Administration (MBA) or similar studies such as company secretarial, to help boost their hiring chances.

In the public sector again can be of two types. The first could involve working with public sector undertakings or government companies and this could also be a role of an in-house counsel work but would differ in terms of work-hours, locations assigned, pay scale and stability in a workplace. The second would be appearing for the civil service examinations and pursue a prestigious and stable career with the Government. At the same time, one must be aware that appearing for the civil service examinations also require a herculean effort hence a law student must be prepared to balance with the already demanding course-work of law school. Law students can of course choose to appear for the examination at a later date but their筹码 would certainly be to be managing their job and studies for a competitive exam. While shifting to the public sector to secure an administrative role, it can be a great incentive for law students. However,ırl only studying for a public sector job for students to have clarity on what they aspire to do as a public servant to better orient themselves towards a successful stint with the Government.

23. Instruction to Candidate for Answer Sheet:

Method of marking Answers:

- In the “OBJECTIVE TYPE” examination, you do not write the answers. For each question (hereinafter referred to as “item”) several suggested answers (hereinafter referred to as “Responses”) are given. You have to choose one response to each item.

- The question paper will be in the Form of TEST BOOKLET. The booklet will contain item bearing numbers 1,2,3…………etc. Under each item, Responses marked (a), (b), (c), (d) will be given. Your task will be to choose the correct response. If you think there is more than one correct response, then choose what you consider the best response.

- In any case, for each item you are to select only one response. If you select more than one response, your response will be considered wrong.

- In the Answer Sheet, Serial Nos from 1 to 100 are printed. Against each number, there are circles marked (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e). After you have read each item in the Test Booklet and decided which one of the given responses is correct or the best, you have to mark your response by completely blackening with BLACK BALL PEN to indicate your response.

- For example, if the correct answer to item 1 is (b), then the circle containing the letter (b) is to be completely blacked with black ball pen as shown below:

Example: (a) (b) (c) (d) (e)

Candidates must write the paper in their own handwriting. In no circumstances will they be allowed the help of a scribe.

- Please read and abide by the instructions on the cover of Test Booklet. If any candidate indulges in disorderly or improper conduct, he will render himself liable for disciplinary action and/or imposition of a penalty as the competent authority may deem fit.

- Candidates should exercise due care in handling and filling up the answer sheets. They should use BLACK BALL PEN only to darken the circles, for writing in boxes also, they should use BLACK BALL PEN. Since the entries made by the candidates by darkening the circles will be taken into account while evaluating the answer sheets, they should make these entries very carefully and accurately.

- Pens with any other colours are prohibited. Do not use Pencil or Ink pen.

Candidates should note that any omission/ mistake/ discrepancy in encoding/ filling of details in the OMR answer sheet, especially with regard to Roll Number will render the answer sheet liable for rejection.

ALTERNATE CAREER OPPORTUNITIES FOR LAW STUDENTS

1. Financial and Commercial Management

With the rise of digitisation, the role of financial and commercial managers is becoming more prominent. These professionals are responsible for overseeing the financial operations of an organisation, ensuring compliance with regulatory requirements, and managing financial risks.

2. Legal Journalism

The role of a legal journalist involves reporting on court cases, legal events, and legal developments. This career path requires a strong understanding of the legal system and excellent writing and research skills. Legal journalism can be pursued through a journalism degree or by gaining experience in legal writing.

3. NGO Work

Non-governmental organisations (NGOs) often require legal professionals to help with policy research, advocacy, and legal drafting. This role is ideal for those who are interested in social justice and want to make a difference in society.

4. Entrepreneurship

Law graduates can start their own businesses, leveraging their legal expertise to provide legal services to startups or to develop proprietary products. This career path requires a good understanding of business law and entrepreneurship.

5. Industry specific roles

Law graduates can also find roles in specific industries such as technology, healthcare, or entertainment. These roles require a combination of legal expertise and industry-specific knowledge.

While these are some of the alternate career paths, there are many others available. The key is to identify one's interests and passions and to pursue a career that fulfills those.
