The long drawn-out battle of India's struggle for freedom is a saga of supreme sacrifices made by the Indian people. There were several landmarks in this struggle against the mighty British Empire. The first mile-stone was the great revolt of 1857 which was spearheaded by Rani Lakshmi Bai, Tajya Tope, Azimullah and Nana Sahib. The failure of the uprising made the Indian intelligentsia aware of the ineffectiveness of armed resistance.

Towards the end of the 19th century and thereafter, the political scene took a new turn. The frustration arising out of delayed and unsatisfactory British reforms, pursuit of the 'Divide and Rule' policy and high-handed repression fomented an extremist type of national movement in Bengal and Maharashtra. The leaders of this movement were Lokamanya Tilak, Aurobindo Ghosh, Bipin Chandra Pal, Lala Lajpat Rai and others.

Gandhi launched five movements of all-India character against the British rulers from 1919 to the attainment of independence in 1947. These movements are known as the Non-Cooperation Movements of 1919 and 1921, the Civil Disobedience Movements of 1919 and 1930 and the 'Quit India' Movement of 1942.

The 'Quit' Resolution of August 1942 marked the turning point in India's struggle for freedom. Gandhi explained it as "a complete and irremovable withdrawal of the British from India at least in reality and properly from all non-European possessions.

Gandhi was arrested before he could unfold the strategy for the movement. He did not anticipate his arrest as pointed out by Maulana Abul Kalam Azad in his autobiography India Wins Freedom and believed that the 'British would hesitate to take any drastic steps with the Japanese knocking at India's doors'. He thought that this would give the Congress time and opportunity to organise an effective movement. In fact Gandhi envisaged a period of negotiations before launching the struggle and his letter to the Viceroy, Lord Lintilghow (dated 14 August 1942) clearly brings out this fact. He referred to his speeches at the ACC in which he indicated an interval which could have been taken advantage of. The negotiations, according to D.S. Tendulkar (Mahatma — Life of Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi) were to cover at least a period of three weeks. Gandhi was thus not able to finalise his programme due to his sudden arrest.

According to Jawaharlal Nehru "even privately Gandhi did not suggest any plans of the movement except saying that in the event of the failure of negotiations, he would appeal for some kind of non-cooperation and one-day cessation of all work in the country." However, the official biographer of the 'Mahatma' quotes verbatim the draft of instructions prepared by Gandhi and marked confidential which

EMERGING CAREERS IN FOOD AND NUTRITION SCIENCE

Nidhi Prasad

Like water, food is necessary for our survival. Food impacts a person's health, body and mind, thus maintaining wellness as well as preventing illness.

There is little doubt that the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic has affected every aspect of our lives—both at home and in work spheres. Social restrictions, quarantine, telecommuting, virtual learning, etc. have all become the new norm. No one knows for how long these pandemic safety measures will need to stay in place. This scenario presents a perfect time to protect and improve our health because a well-balanced nutritious diet helps support a strong immune system. Good nutrition also reduces the likelihood of developing other health problems, including obesity, heart disease, diabetes, and some types of cancer. Now more people are becoming aware of the impact their diet can have on their daily life, and growing interest in improving their health through nutrition. This phenomenon has fueled a global demand for qualified nutrition professionals, who can apply their expertise to improve public health and engage in health promotion. It is an exciting field with many career opportunities which allow you to improve people's lives with evidence-based insights about food and nutrition. Having knowledge about food and nutrition can put you in many work settings, like offices, labs, hospitals, schools, corporations, restaurants and other places.

NUTRITION AND DIETETICS: A nutritionist is a person who advises on matters of food and nutrition and their impact on health. Some people specialize in particular areas, such as sports nutrition, public health, or animal nutrition, among other disciplines. As a nutritionist or dietician, you will suggest your clients the right kind of food combination according to their age, weight, gender and nutritional requirements. You’ll help them in reducing/gaining weight, maintaining a healthy lifestyle and meeting their dietary requirements.

While nutritionist and dietician are very similar professionals,

In the article ‘Career in Cinematography’ by Hiren Keswani, the following words were added during editing “Among these options, the most lucrative one is DIT Colorist." However, the exact words of the author were: “Today we will touch upon one of the above mentioned options, being a DIT…very important and relevant in today’s era of Digital Cinema”...

It is true that the British ruled our country for over two centuries but it is also a fact that the people of our country had never fully accepted their rule. The dissent against British rule found expression in one way or the other from the very beginning. By mid 19th century sparks of revolt against British domination had become visible and in 1857 they flared up and took the form of the war of Indian independence. It is also called a mutiny. It was an armed revolt but it did not succeed. In this freedom struggle great patriots like Rani Lakshmi Bai of Jhansi, Nana Sahib, Tatyata Tope fought under Bahadur Shah Zafar's leadership. About half a century later a non-violent movement against British rule started under Mahatma Gandhi's leadership. The Indian National Congress played a prominent role in it. Along with this a parallel resistance movement had also begun. Those who joined it felt that the non-violent movement was not enough. They thought it necessary to take up arms against the British. In this movement martyrs such as Chandrashekhar Azad, Ram Prasad Bismil, Ashfaq Ullah Khan, Batukeshwar Dutt etc. took an active part and sacrificed their lives for the country. These revolts from time to time wrote letters to their parents, brother, sisters, friends and comrades. Publication Division's book titled "REMEMBER US ONCE IN A WHILE... Letters of Martyrs" is a collection of their letters which inspire us with their intense feeling.

ROSHAN SINGH

Thakur Roshan Singh hailed from the village Newada in Shahjanpur district in Uttar Pradesh. He was a true follower of Pandit Ram Prasad Bismil. When "Bismil" undertook, a 16-day hunger striker in Lucknow Jail, Roshan Singh also joined him by remaining without food for 16 days.

During the Kakori conspiracy trial no one suspected that Thakur Roshan Singh would also be awarded a death sentence along with Ram Prasad Bismil. On December 19, he took the Geeta in his hand and at once walked towards the gallows and after loudly chanting Vandemataram, climbed on to the scaffold.

On December 13, six days before he was hanged Roshan Singh wrote a letter to one of his friends. This letter informs us about his patience and courage and also his religious thoughts. The letter is as follows:

"Hon'gling will be undertaken during this week. I pray god rewards you for the affection you have shown. Please! you must not feel sorry for me. My death will be a matter of happiness. Death is a must for one who is living in this world. In this world a man should not earn ill reputation by doing various deeds and should remember God at the time of his death. One should have these two assets. By the grace of God, I have both. My death, therefore does not call for sorrow of any manner. I have been away from the children for the last two years. During this period I got ample opportunity for prayer. This removed all the illusion and now there is no desire left in me. I fully believe I am going for a day of comfort after completing my painful journey in this world. It is written in our scripture that a person who sacrifices his life in a righteous war attains the same position as is acquired by those who devote themselves to penance in the jungle. Last salute,

Yours, Roshan"

"Emperor Versus Birsa Mahato Das July 3, 1925.

Sure, your applicant very respectfully submits,
(a) that about four days ago an identification parade was conducted at the railway station police lock up where I was kept under arrest.
(b) that a few shabbily dressed Punjab sweepers and coolies aged between thirty-five, forty years were brought from the railway station. These persons were brought to the lock up through an alley close to which the Magistrate’s car was among the persons who was to identify. I was made to stand among those sixteen persons although I expressed my resentment to the Magistrate about the absurdity of such an identification parade since those Punjabias were not only very stout, anyone looking at their facial features could tell that they were not Bengalis. But no notice was taken of my objection. Though I repeatedly told the Magistrate that it would be fair if I was paraded alongside similarly looking Bengalis since the police had with them my photograph and signature which they could show to the person or persons who were to identify me.
(c) that I was asked to make a few questions to the person who came to identify me about the date on which he allegedly saw me. But my request was not only denied, the police officers who came there dragged away the person who came to identify me.
(d) that the entire action was carried out secretly and hurriedly and I am afraid that there are many irregularities in it that would greatly damage my defence.

Birsa Mahato Das, July 3, 1925. 210 p.m."

The hearing of the Lahore conspiracy case began on July 25, 1929. Before it Yatindra Nath was arrested and sent to Lahore jail on June 4, 1929 where all the underrulders of the Lahore conspiracy case demanded improvements in jail administrations and started a hunger strike in support of their demand. The hunger strike continued for a long period. Yatindra Nath Das attained martyrdom on September 13, 1929, after fasting for 63 days.

On August 7, 1905, the Swadeshi movement took off as a movement to build national self-reliance. The Swadeshi movement sought to oppose British rule and encourage the ideas of self-help, swadeshi enterprise, national education, and use of Indian languages. To fight for Swaraj, the radicals advocated mass mobilisation and boycott of British institutions and goods. This was seen as a necessary preconition to ultimately and effectively challenging the British rule. The Swadeshi programme developed along two lines - of reviving traditional crafts that had been destroyed by competition from the British goods and of building an enterprise on modern western lines. The boycott of imported textiles, revival of Indian crafts, and a rise in demand created by the Swadeshi movement did provide an important stimulus to handloom-weaving.

The National Handloom Day is observed annually on August 7 to honour the handloom weavers in the country and also highlight India’s handloom industry. Prime Minister Narendra Modi, in the 70th edition of Mann Ki Baat, talked about nation building by being 'Vocal For Local'. He said, “Supporting local entrepreneurs, artists, craftsmen, weavers should come naturally to us. The National Handloom Day on the 7th of August is an occasion where we can start to attempt that.” He encouraged the citizens to make it a point to definitely buy handloom products being made in rural areas and share it with friends on social media.

What is National Handloom Day?
National Handloom Day was first celebrated in 2015 when the Hon’ble Prime Minister launched the India Handloom Brand for branding of high quality handloom products to promote products made by weavers who weave with high quality, authentic traditional designs with zero defect and zero defect on environment. Since the launch of the Brand, 1590 registrations have been issued under 164 product categories (as on March 31, 2021). India Handloom Brand has partnered with 135 Retail Stores, to showcase and sell the exclusive IHBM items from their stores.

National Handloom Day seeks to focus on the contribution of handloom to the socio-economic development of the country and also increase the income of weavers. The major objective is to generate awareness about the importance of the handloom industry and create a market space which cater especially to the demand for diverse products among the younger generation and export markets with high growth potential. The day aims to increase awareness about the benefits of handloom, role of weavers, and support the handloom weavers by encouraging everyone to buy handloom goods.

Why celebrate handlooms?
Handlooms are environmentally friendly, and a viable way to make a living. The handloom sector provides 43.33 million people with jobs, and is the second largest source of employment in rural India. Around 95% of the world's handwoven fabric comes from India. Handloom mainly uses natural fiber like cotton, silk, wool, jute, etc. Therefore, it is eco-friendly. We can make it even more eco-friendly by using vegetable dyes and other organic products.

Handlooms are important not only for aesthetic and cultural reasons, they are also essential to political and diplomatic relations, as they are symbols of the identity, culture and inclusive growth of a country. More than 50 per cent of India’s total weaver population resides in the country’s eastern and north-eastern regions. The sector has the advantage of being less capital intensive. There is minimal use of energy, it is eco-friendly, and allows flexibility of small production, openness to innovations and adaptability to market requirements. It is a natural productive asset and a tradition at the cottage level, which has sustained and grown by transfer of skill from one generation to the other.

How does it help local artisans?
Handloom is a major source of livelihood for tribal communities in Machha Procesh, Chattisgarh, Maharashtra, Odisha, Jharkhand, Gujarat and industrially backward states of North Eastern Region. Government and Non-Governmental Organisations (NGOs) have taken keen interest in promoting the handlooms and provide financial support to help create business ventures. This has encouraged the tribal communities to create Self-Help Groups and Cooperatives, thus building a platform for generating income and inculcating entrepreneurial skills.

The Government has taken several measures to boost the handloom sector. The Handlooms (Reservation of Production Articles) Act, 1955, Handloom Census, Geographical indication, e-commerce initiatives such as ‘e-chaggas’, capacity building programs and the overall revival of handlooms and Khadi Gramodyog Industries are important steps launched by the Government of India to boost the handloom sector in India. Khadi was mentioned by the Honourable Prime Minister in his last Mann Ki Baat where he said that buying Khadi is ‘service to people, service to the country’. Khadi, a fabric that breathes ‘warm in winter, cool in summer’, is a handspun and hand-woven cloth which acquired popular status during Indian freedom struggle and it gave a Swadeshi spirit. Khadi, derived from khaddar, can be cotton, silk or wool. The difference between khadi and other handloom fabrics is apparent in the texture. The small weaving errors or unevenness give Khadi its unique charm. Apart from khadi, India is home to several world famous handloom products. Let us get to know about some of them.

1. Baluchari (West Bengal)
This fabric is named after the village ‘Baluchur’ located on the banks of the Brahmaputra River in Mymensingh district, West Bengal. Baluchari weaving flourished during the period of Muslim Quill Khan, the Diwan of Bengal, an aristocratic Hindu Bramin who embraced Islam. These textiles are famous for their elaborate ‘anchal’ (pallu). It is a highly decorative silk fabric having extra weft on ‘pattu’, border and body. Designs are made with extra weft using silk yarn. No zari is used as done in Benarasi or other silk saree. The motifs are mainly derived from the then social-religious customs, animals, lifestyles of people, etc and are organised in narrative style in pallu or ‘anchal’ portion. Munsheeabad variety of interwoven muga silk yarn was originally used in Baluchari sarees. Main feature of Baluchari Sari is the arrangement of design in pallu by maintaining the corner and cross border perfectly in boxes. ‘Kai’ technique was originally followed by Baluchari weavers. The pictorial elements of these sarees retain a degree of continuity and evidence of assimilation of diverse cultures giving rise to a distinctive art form that was accommmodative and secular.

2. Kancheepuram/Kanjeevaram (Tamil Nadu)
Kancheepuram is the silk city as well as temple city of Tamil Nadu. The traditional Kancheepuram sari is woven in a shuttle pit loom by using adi technique. It is carried with the help of two weavers for making solid borders (Korval) and petti technique for making contrast pallu. The sarees are woven with the traditional designs inspired from the sculptures of temples in the town. The materials used for manufacturing of Kancheepuram silk sarees are mulberry silk yarn and gold zari. The original gold zari used a ratio of 40% silver, Copper 35.6%, 24% silk and 0.5% of gold. Fiannened silver wire is coiled to conceal the core silk thread. This silver thread is coated with gold to produce zari used in the production of silk sarees. The specialty of Kancheepuram silk saree is contrast border with Korval and contrast pallu with Petti technique.

3. Tussar (Bihar, Chhattisgarh)
Tussar is a variety of wild silk, popularly known as Vanra Silk. The unique feature of the Tussar Silk product lies in its unique texture and unevenness. Rough, coarse texture and weft bars are visible due to unevenness of the yarn. The colour varies from yellowish beige to brown in natural state. Tussar silk, alternatively known as Kosa Silk, is generated by the silkworm Antheraea mylitta which mainly thrives on the food plants Asan and Arjun. Traditionally, Tussar silk fabrics are woven using domestic reeled Tussar silk yarn (Kosa) both in warp and weft. Sometimes, cotton and spun silk yarns are also being used for ornamentation and extra weft design. Generally, Pitloom is used for weaving with Jia and Patla technique for making small butt designs.

4. Pochampally ikkat (Telangana)
Pochampally is a well known cotton and silk ikat weaving centre in Yadadri Bhuvanagiri district of Telangana. The fabric uses simple methods to produce bold geometrical designs of flowers, birds and animal patterns. The Pochampally fabric is perfectly reversible with the same appearance of the design on both sides. Intensity of the colours in the design also appears the same on both the sides of the fabric, whereas if the fabric is printed, then colours in the back side of the fabric will be lighter. The technique of ikat weaving is believed to be brought in the town of Pochampally from Chirala in Andhra Pradesh. The materials used for weaving are different counts of twisted cotton yarns, silk yarns and zari, depending upon the quality of the fabric. Ikat is a weaving style that employs resist dyeing technique to impart colours to the yarns before their interlacement. The fabric woven in this technique shows a feathered and hazy pattern.
there is a slight difference between these two food and diet experts. anyone who offers nutritional advice on a professional basis can be called a professional nutritionist. to be called a certified nutritionist, they need to have a certification from clinical nutrition certification (CNC) board. for becoming a dietitian, one needs to have the required academic degree and pass an exam to get registered with the indian dietary association (IDA).

following are the study route one can choose to make a career in nutrition and dietetics:

path 1: clear class XII in science stream and pursue B.Sc. nutrition and dietetics for 3 years, followed by M.Sc. nutrition and dietetics for 2 years. OR path 2: clear class XII in science stream (home science is recommended) and then pursue B.Sc. home science for 3 years, followed by M.Sc. home science. OR path 3: clear class XII in science stream then pursue B.Sc. nutrition and dietetics for 3 years followed by postgraduate diploma in nutrition and dietetics.

you are also required to complete an internship and clear the licensing exam conducted by the indian dietary association (IDA) after your postgraduate. one can also advance in the field by opting for PhD or further research, as the opportunity for continuous learning is high.

new emerging careers in nutrition

a graduate with a B.Sc. in nutrition is qualified to work in a number of new emerging areas such as:

I. Sports nutritionist: If you have a passion for fitness and nutrition, you may want to consider becoming a professional sports nutritionist. As a sports nutritionist, you will help bodybuilders, sports athletes and other fitness enthusiasts to optimize their performance on the field or the court while they improve their health with nutrition. to become a sports nutritionist, one requires a bachelor’s degree in sports science and nutrition or in dietetics. after obtaining a bachelor’s degree, the aspiring candidate can look for on-the-job training with some sports organization or go for master’s degree in the related field by clearing entrance exam for National Institute of Nutrition. Sports nutrition deals with specific nutrition requirements and guidelines of sports players depending on the category of sports. the scope of this field is as follows:

- Nutritionist at sports training, gymns and fitness centre
- Digital sports coach for gym-goers
- Sports nutrition programmer
- Certified supplements and granular nutritionist
- Nutritionist at sports authority of India (SAI)

II. Sustainable Nutritionist: The United Nations estimates the world population to reach almost 10 billion by 2050. providing everyone with a nutritious diet and protecting the planet requires a global response. the emerging topical issue of sustainable eating and diets might offer new opportunities for the training of nutrition professionals. Food sustainability is being conscious of how our everyday choices can influence the future of our planet. Dieticians tell people about green-eating tips, the benefits of plant-based eating, importance of ethical eating, and the impact industrial agriculture has on our planet. the EAT-Lancet Commission, a group of scientists from 18 different countries, addressed the existing evidence surrounding the planet’s food demands, waste, and overall diet. According to the commission, food production is the world’s largest cause of environmental change. If we want to implement real change and discover smarter approaches to agriculture, we need a critical understanding of all the components of a food system and the sustainable food system model.

the scope of this field is as follows:

- graduate can work as a project assistant, project associate at an organization like pHI, WHO, UNICEF, other health organizations.
- work as a chief nutritionist in an NGO or private organization.
- nutrition journalism is another field to explore. the writer will have to perform in the field of food and nutrition.
- sustainable food nutritionist

public health nutritionists focus on the public health problems regarding food and nutrition like anemia, vitamin A, diabetes, iodine deficiency etc. the scope of this field is as follows:

- graduates can work as a public health consultant, food policy advisor, public health researcher, food policy analyst. the scope of this field is as follows:

public health nutrition aims to promote the overall nutritional health among a population. this can be done through a variety of ways, most notably through health services, program development, and public policy. Public health nutrition is the field of study that is concerned with the nutrition of a population. to ensure the prevention of nutrition-related illnesses / problems in the population, and the government policies and programs that are aimed at solving these problems. public health nutritionists / professionals use large scale, organized and multidisciplinary approaches to solve the problems that affect the population i.e., large number of people for whom group action is necessary. therefore, this field is multidisciplinary in nature and is built on the foundations of biological and social sciences. it is important for a professional in the field of public nutrition to identify the problem and its magnitude, understand how and why these problems occur and then plan strategies and actions to implement them and evaluate their impact.

IV. Food Safety Officer: Food Safety Officer is a professional who is responsible to analyze food samples collected from various places for inspection. the major purpose of the analysis of food sample is to determine any hazardous effect of a food product, suspicious material in food or raw material used for its manufacturing. Based on the results, the Food Safety Officer can issue a notice to the manufacturer, distributor or the seller of the food product if found using hazardous contents or raw material. Other job roles of a Food Safety Officer include surprise visits at hotels, restaurants and food industry for inspection of food items and to survey if all safety protocols and guidelines are being followed during the manufacturing or preparation of food articles. in India, the state governments hire Food Safety Officer at an administrative post. The recruitment is done based on state Civil Services (SCS) examinations. the candidate must hold a bachelor’s degree or a master’s degree in a relevant discipline like b. Sci or b. Tech in Food Technology/ Dairy Technology/ Food Science or Biochemistry or Biochemistry etc. from a recognized institute. those who wish to work as a scientist must hold a PhD degree in a relevant discipline. After acquiring the relevant degree, the candidate must apply for the post of Food Safety Officer. the recruiting process is based on the state Civil Services (SCS) examination. the selection will be done on the basis of performance in the entrance test and personal interview round. the notification for recruitment is released on official websites, newspapers, and other media by the respective state governments. QUIT INDIA MOVEMENT: CHARACTER AND ORGANIZATION was placed before the Working Committee on 7 August for consideration.

This draft of instructions and speeches of the Quit India movement helps to give an idea of the movement contemplated. This finds further corroborations in the programme chalked out by Dr Rajendra Prasad for the guidance of the people of Bihar which is referred to in its autobiograph. There were to be some significant departures from the rest of the provinces and districts where the movement was not to be confined to Congressmen only, Sardar Patel made it clear but it was intended to "take in all men who called themselves Indians". It was to be a mass movement and every element of the society, the princes, the peasants, the soldiers, the civilians, the workers and the students were called upon to participate in the "Quit-stuggle". Unlike earlier movements people were not to court arrest voluntarily and if excesses were committed by the Government, resistance was to be offered. There was to be no submission to coercion or injustice. Soldiers were on the other hand, asked to refuse to shoot down their own fellow countrymen ("the people of India"). The labourers were to refuse to vacate their farms and homes required for military purposes, unless suitable compensation was offered. "We do not want to hinder military activities but neither shall we submit to arbitrary h B a n d h u s h e n e d . "

Those employed in Government offices, Government factories, railways, post offices, were not to go on strike in the initial stages of the struggle. But they were expected to inform the authorities that they were with the Congress and it was "their clear duty to resign if asked to perpetrate excesses." Students were to boycott schools and colleges and those above 18 years of age were to participate in the movement. In this respect the programme instructed them "to read the sign of the times and part with the responsibilities of administration to their subjects; otherwise they would have no quarter in free India." The movement was to start with hasty but no one was to be coerced to close his shop. Proceedings and meetings were to be arranged only in villages where there was no fear of violence or disturbances. In case of arrest of a leader, another was to take his place and in the last resort, everyone was to be his own leader. Saty was to be manufactured wherever possible and those who had "the courage and are prepared to risk their all should refuse to pay even the land tax to the Government was the clarion call of the movement. It was emphasised that if anybody had the spirit of communalism or harboured hatred or ill-will against Englishmen, he would best help the struggle by keeping aloof. The struggle was to be carried on ceaselessly and Gandhiji's last message to the nation immediately before his arrest was "Do or Die." "Every man is free to go to the fullest length under ahimsa by complete deadlock, strikes and all other non-violent means. Satyagrahis should go out to die and not to live. It is only when individuals go out to seek and face death that the nation will survive—Karene Ya Marene (we shall do or die)."

Gandhiji thus envisaged a movement which was to be more forceful and wider in scope than his earlier satyagrahas. But non-violence was to remain the sheet-anchor and secrecy was to be opposed. The phraseology used by Gandhiji in his various statements in the months preceding his arrest as, "the contemplated struggle was to be a genuine struggle of the "people of India" as long as there is a chance to take any risk however great; after all it is an open rebellion...My intention is to make it as short and swift as possible.....Leave India to God. If that is too much then leave her to anarchy..."

(Harjan, 24 May) and his last message before arrest 'Do or Die' had no doubt similarity with the war slogans at least to the extent that both sought to enlist the workers in battles in which both parties are armed, but anyone who had been a careful follower of Gandhi's speeches and writings, as pointed out by Horace Alexander of the Society of Friends, London, or one who had lived in the atmosphere of his mind as the millions in the movement, could not have been blind to the other side of the coin. For Gandhi any systematic breach of law, however non-violent was open rebellion. It may be pointed out here that extracts from his writings had been torn from their context and a 'shredder' meaning put upon them by presenting them in a false setting.

A careful study of the available documents reveals Gandhi's correspondence with the Government and the proceedings of the Working Committee and the All India Congress Committee and the statements made by the leaders like Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel and Maulana Abul Kalam Azad before and after their arrest. But the programme and the movement was never contemplated by Gandhiji at any stage. The main emphasis of the Bombay Resolution was that the people 'must remember that non-violence is the basis of this movement.' Even a revolutionary leader like Jaya Prakash Narayan made it clear in his open letter of instructions to all fighters for Freedom that "Gandhiji is in no event prepared to depart from non-violence. With him it is a question of faith and life principle." The arrest of Gandhiji and other leaders who knew the working of his mind, left the responsibility of chalking out a programme of action on the shoulders of those who had escaped arrest. Included among these leaders were Sucheta Kipilani, Ram Manohar Lohia, Gopinath Bareda and Sardar Ali who prepared a sort of instructions from the All India Congress Committee to all Provincial Congress Committees regarding the programme of the movement. Later on Aruna Asaf Ali joined the group. The movement gained momentum after the escape of Jaya Prakash Narayan and his colleagues from Hazardarganj Jail in October 1942, when efforts were made to coordinate the activities in all the States.

Programmes were framed with some reorientation and in a highly significant document entitled The Freedom Struggle Front, the Socialist leaders unfolded their strategy. Their plan envisaged "a single job for all, that is, a complete stand where every group, every party, every class, and section and every individual can find a place to fit without (losing) their separate identities", to push on the upsurge of a whole people. Different social groupings were to be mobilised on "a large scale", 'a comprehensive movement to face the frustration in each layer of society was to be nursed into a disruptive force' to help the onward march of revolution. "The training of workers, the issue of leaflets, news sheets, slogans, the organisation of contacts, the raising of funds, frequent reviews of progress and issue of directions to the fighting line" were "urgent administrative problems of the Freedom Struggle Front". The first circular issued under the signature of Jaya Prakash Narayan addressed to "All Fighters for Freedom" blamed the Congress for not placing any programme before the people when the first phase of the movement began. The British rule in many parts of the country had been over. He justified the use of arms to fight the British in terms of the Bombay resolution. Hull stress was on "intensive propaganda work among masses, peasants in villages, workers in factories, students, etcetera, everywhere."

Then there was work to be done in the "Indian army and services in native States and on the frontiers of India", and Jaya Prakash's other appeals were addressed to American officers and soldiers to fight from shooting Indians, to students, to the peasants, and affairs. Programme for solving the immediate problems and attempts at re-organising were made in the hope of imparting new life to the cause but by February, 1943 the movement was practically over. Symbolic demonstrations however, continued on certain days of national importance as the Independence Day, 15th Anniversary of Quit India Movement, Birthday, etc., till Gandhi's release in May 1944. The chief weakness of the movement was lack of coordination.

"There was left no central agency after the arrests of the leaders to give directions or coordinate the activities in various provinces. The lack of a co-ordinating body, organisation, according to Jaya Prakash Narayan, "was so considerable that even important Congressmen were not aware of the progress of the revolt and till late the course of rising remained a matter of debate in accordance with the Congress programme. Organisation meant secrecy and in this respect, no place. The Gandhiji's conception of non-violent Satyagraha was less important was the lack of a clear cut programme of action. When the first phase of the rising was over, there was no further programme placed before the people. Jaya Prakash cited the instance of Balia and some other places where the people had seized power but did not know what to do next. A few days later a contingent of soldiers was able to restore British power without much resistance. The people, according to the Socialist leader, should have set up in these areas their own units of revolutionary Government and created their own police and militia. Lack of funds was another drawback and in this connection Jaya Prakash depicted the role of the wealthy Hindus who "have proved to be not only extremely selfish but also exceedingly small men." The movement was mostly confined to students, peasants and the lower middle classes. Clive Branson, a British soldier, who was in India during the period was mismonthed when he wrote that the proletariat and peasants would have to create the conditions for the Indian labour unions under Communist influence had decided against participation in the movement, workers did not lag behind and there were large scale strikes in mills in Kanpur, Jajnpurah and Ahmedabad. Muslims escaping the small group of nationalists followed the advice of the Muslim League. A strong and kept aloof from the struggle. The Muslim League, in a resolution passed at its Bombay session on 16 August 1942, condemned the Congress in launching the movement for the liberation of the country and called on the Muslim masses to abstain from any participation in the movement presented by the Congress and to continue to pursue their own normal peaceful life. However, there were no communal clashes anywhere except on a very minor scale in isolated areas. In the earlier stages of the struggle, the Communists supported the Congress and preached violent overthrow of the British rule in Britain. However, when Jaya Prakash joined hands with the Allies against the Axis, the Communist Party of India advocated the building of a "national uniled front of the entire freedom loving people of India for the defence of this country from Fascist oppression and for its liberation from Imperial enslavement." Indian Communists therefore openly opposed the Congress leaders. Jaya Prakash, as the General Secretary of the Communist Party, P.C. Joshi, "cuts the nation away from freedom's battle and divides progressive forces in Britain and India." According to Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, the Communists "openly joined the war propaganda and did everything to help the British war effort. M.N. Roy accepted funds from Government officers and carried on propaganda in favour of war."

It must, however, be added that in spite of the Party's directive there were a number of Communists, mostly ex-t errorists and revolutionaries who refused to follow the Party's no-war policy.

The 'Quit India' Movement is a landmark in India's struggle for freedom. It was the last and, undoubtedly, the bitterest fight for freedom ever waged by any people. As such, it marked all the earlier movements including the Great Revolt of 1857 in dimensions and intensity. It was spread over almost all the provinces from the Himalayas to Cape Comorin. The violent upsurge of the masses and their readiness to sacrifice everything for the emancipation of the motherland showed their grim
QUIT INDIA MOVEMENT: CHARACTER AND ORGANIZATION

The determination to throw off the foreign yoke. It warned the British that they were not wanted in India and that “their belief that any section of Indian people—the Muslims, the depressed classes or the States’ people—favoured continuance of their rule was a delusion.”

The complete breakdown of law and order in many parts of the country and the setting up of parallel independent governments by the people made them realise that they could not hold their sway over India for long. Sardar Patel echoed the new mood of the people when he said “never before had such widespread upsurge happened in India in the history of the British raj, as they did during the last three years. We are proud of the spirit in which the people reacted... the leaders were all of a sudden kidnapped from the midst of the people and people acted on the spur of the moment. Non-violence had taken no doubt deep root but one had to face the reality that violence was the order of the day in the whole world. It would be like the Devil quoting the scriptures, if the world outside criticised India if she switched over from non-violent attempt to regain independence”. The enthusiastic response of the people from one end of the country to the other, many instances of individual and collective heroism and bravery in the face of heavy odds and their untold sufferings and sacrifices hastened the British decision to quit India. Gandhi had, after all, succeeded in convincing the British that they were not morally justified in keeping India under bondage and they had to quit.

Pashmina wool obtained from the underbelly of the wild Tibetan and Ladakh mountain goats (Capra hircus) which has a special luster due to its long, fine fibres, which are as thin as 12 microns. In Kani weaving the design is formed by the manipulation of small wooden sticks called ‘tjois’ which interlock their respective colored threads as they complete each wet of the shawl.

5. Kota Doria (Rajasthan)

Doria (stripe) fabrics in narrow widths for turban used to be woven in Kota in earlier days. When Maharaj Kishore Singh, a great patron of craft, brought weavers from Mysore to Kota, these weavers introduced silk yarn to Doria weaving which is now famously known as ‘Kota Doria’. The fabric has basic texture in combination of cotton and mullberry silk yarn in the base fabric whereas Gold and Silver Zari (fine metal threads) yarn has extra warp and extra weft for designing. The cotton yarn provides strength and suppleness whereas fine raw silk makes the fabric transparent and delicate. Kota doria fabric is woven on a simple pit or throw shuttle frame loom without having any designing devices. In its weaving, the picks do not move directly from one end to the other end of the saree, width wise, but the weft yarn of small length returns being interlaced or interlocked with the threads of different wet colours as per designs. This procedure of returning of threads is called ‘tapestry’ weaving which is the most labour intensive and time consuming one.

6. Patanadi (Maharashtra)

Named after the Patan region in Maharashtra, Patanadi is woven by hand and is made from very fine mullberry silk. More than 2,000 years old, the art was developed in the then splendid city of Pratisthan ruled by the legendary Satavahan as ruler Shalivahana, now Patan in Marathwada. Main raw material used for weaving Patanadi saree is mulberry silk yarn and zari. Preferably, flatweave silk is used as warp and chakhabka silk is used as weft. Patanadi evolved from a cotton base to a silk base. Silk was used in weft designs and in the borders, whereas cotton was used in the body of the fabric. Present day Patanadi has no trace of cotton. Patanadi is woven on a simple pit or throw shuttle loom in such a fashion that it creates a small square check pattern in the fabric, locally called as khat. It is a light weight open textured fabric and soft to touch.

7. Lepcha (Sikkim)

In ancient times, the Lepchas of Sikkim would use to send yarn spun out of flax (jemu) plants to weave clothes. Today, cotton and woolen yarn are used together with vegetable dyes and synthetic colours. Lepcha weaves or Chira are woven on a backstrap loom and thus results in a shorter width. Cotton, used as a base material, is combined with multicoloured motifs woven in woolen yarn. The loom frame is made from bamboo or various types of wood, which is readily available. Traditional designs with different colours are used to make scarves which are used for making bedsprads, bags, belts, curtains, cushion covers, table mats, tray cloths etc. apart from their traditional dress.

8. Muga (Assam)

It was under the patronage of the Ahom dynasty that muga culture thrived and became a part of the social and economic life of the Assamese people. Muga silk was granted Geographical Indication (GI) tag in 2007. The heritage product, woven at Sualkuchi in Kamrup district of Assam, has a natural rich golden colour. Muga silk, due to its low porosity, is difficult to be bleached or dyed, and hence retains its natural beautiful golden tint. As the fabric ages its golden luster Increases. In fact with every wash the beauty of muga gets finer and softer. To weave this fabric in a shuttle frame loom with two head shafts with a drafting of warp, the yarn was sized. And during weaving the pile of warp yarn became compacted with water to get a better texture.

The weaving of Pashmina is an age-old tradition of producing Kani and Jamawar Shawls. Since the Mughal period, Pashmina wool Shawl and Suits has been very famous for their delicate, intricate and traditional patterns that are woven into them. These are composed of threads of differently coloured wool and silk. Kani silk cotton sarees display various beautifully striking motifs that include ‘Dandliar’, ‘Chalta’, ‘janega’ etc. Weaving is done on pit as well as frame loom fitted with jala designing technique. Jala are lifted manually either by helper or woven in a backstrap loom with designs in the body and the pallu of the saree. Due to un-degummed (raw) silk warp, the fabric texture is somewhat very soft. The fabric is not compactly woven. It is transparent and light weight, very suitable for summer wear.

10. Chanderi (Madhya Pradesh)

Situated on the boundary of two cultural regions of Madhya Pradesh, Malwa and Bundelkhand, Chanderi, placed in the Vindhyachal ranges is home to a wide range of traditions. Specialising in producing fine textured Chanderi sarees of silk and cotton embroidered with zari work intricately woven by hand, interspersed with the delicacy of the extra weft motifs, has for times immemorial satisfied the refined tastes of the royalty. Chanderi silk cotton sarees display various beautifully striking motifs that include ‘Dandliar’, ‘Chalta’, ‘janega’ etc. Weaving is done on pit as well as frame loom fitted with jala designing technique. Jala are lifted manually either by helper or woven in a backstrap loom with designs in the body and the pallu of the saree. Food Blogger: Whenever you order food or are searching for good restaurants to eat at, the first thing you generally do is check the online reviews made by other visitors. There are certainly people passionate enough about food that they travel to different places specifically to try out their food and inform others about the best places to eat at. These are called Food Bloggers and they are becoming the next big thing. Whether you want to specialize in the food joints in your own city or explore cuisines from all around the country/world is a call you get to take. There is no specific career path to become a Food Blogger. However, courses to gain skills in photography, content writing, blogging, social media and a little of digital marketing and web design will prove to be an advantage if you wish to go this route. While many food bloggers are self-employed, i.e., they have their own blog; many others also work full-time or part-time with established food and lifestyle websites.

Food Critic: If you too are crazy about food and can evaluate tastes, restaurants and hotels with a critical eye, then you can consider becoming a food critic. Food critics explore minute details of a food dish, such as its texture, taste, smell, appearance, quality, flavours, etc. and share their opinions through written columns or even video shows. Other than a love for food, knowledge about cuisines, flavours and food elements is of utmost importance. Thus, a degree in Hotel Management or Culinary Arts will be useful. You can also pursue degrees in English Literature, Mass Communication, Journalism, etc, to brush up your writing skills. Most restaurants, cafes and bars invite food critics to review their food. Food critics often write for magazines, newspapers and online hours.

Highlights of the 79th Episode of 'Mann Ki Baat'

- At the Tokyo Olympics, watching Indian sportspersons marching, the Tirouli, exhilarated not just me but the entire crowd. They were unitedly extolled her warriors saying, "Vijayi Bhavai!"

- The 26th of July is Kargil Vijay Diwas. The Kargil War is a symbol of the bravery and valour on part of India’s Armed Forces which the whole world has watched. This time this pride filled day was celebrated amid Amit Mahatov, the inspiring courage and bravery of the Kargil heroes.

- Immuneless freedom fighters and great men are being remembered by the country during Amit Mahatov. There are many such incidents, such freedom fighters whose contributions have been huge, but have not been adequately discussed. Today, people are able to know about them. Now, to Mohanlal Day, for instance...the tiny town of Mohanlal in Manipur was once a major base of Netaji Subhash Chandra Bose’s Indian National Army (INA) during World War Two.

- Programmes under Amit Mahatov are being successfully organised by the Government and social organisations. A similar event is about to take place on the 15th of August this time...this is an Endeavour connected with the National Anthem. It’s an effort on part of the Ministry of Culture to get the maximum number of Indians sing the National Anthem together. For this, a website too has been created — Rashtragram.in. With the help of this website, you can render the National Anthem and record it, thereby getting connected with the campaign.

- Friends, in the rural and tribal regions of our country, handloom is a major source of livelihood. This is a sector that comprises lifeblood of women, weavers and craftsmen. Even small efforts on your part will give rise to a new hope in weavers. Please urge your dear brothers and sisters, to make it a point to definitely buy handloom products being made in rural areas and share it with yourHandloom. My Pride.

- Farmer friendly orders to the freedom movement and Khadi, remembering revered Bapu is but natural. Just the way the Culti India Movement, Bharat Chhoro Andolan started under Bapu’s leadership, every country today has to lead a Bharat Jodo Andolan. Come, on Amit Mahatov, let us make a sacred Amit resolve that the country remains one and we protect its nobility. We have to move forward with the mantra Nation First, Always First.

- Sayayi Praneeth ji is a Software Engineer, hailing from Andhra Pradesh. Last week, he narrated the story of how small area farmers had to suffer a lot due to the vagaries of weather. Now he purchases weather data from different data sources and gives the you need the fresh, timely, and accurate weather information through various media to farmers in local language. Besides weather updates, Praneeth ji also gives guidance to people about what they should do in different climatic conditions...especially how to be safe from floods or how to avoid storm or lightning.

-Shivam Isqu Munda jji hails from a village in Sambalpur district of Odisha. Isqu jji once used to work as a daily wager but now he has become an internet sensation. He is earning a lot through his YouTube Channel. In his videos he shows prominently the local dishes, traditional ways of cooking, village, his lifestyle, and family and food habits. This effort of his is different for many reasons. Especially because through this people living in cities get a chance to watch a lifestyle about which they don’t know much. Shivam jji by blending culture and cuisine is inspiring us.

- Recently, you must have read, seen that a startup established by an alumnus of IIT Madras has made a 3D printed house. Actually this startup has added a factor to the 3D printing technology. In the first phase, 3D printing machines have been used to make a wall and then print on a layer of cement to make the wall of the house. This process of additive manufacturing and casting of concrete has been done in a single print. When we come to India, there is a need for a very large number of houses. When people come to know about the house, the demand increased and so that the housing need is fulfilled.

- In Nigiri of Tamil Nadu, Radhika Shastri has started the AmbuRx project. The purpose of this project is to provide easy transport for the treatment of patients in hill areas. Today, six AmbuRx are serving in the Nigiri hills and are coming to the aid of patients in remote parts during the time of emergency. He AmbuRx is equipped with a stretcher, oxygen mask, portable fan, first aid box and other things.

- India recently handed over the Holy Relic or the remains of Saint King Ketevan to the Government of Georgia. This ceremony has only strengthened the relations between the two nations but also between Goa and Georgia. This is because these holy relics of Saint King Ketevan were found in 2005 from Saint Augustine Church in Goa. This is an incident about four to five hundred years ago. Queen Ketavan was the daughter of the royal family of Georgia. In 1624, after ten years of imprisonment, she was martyred. According to an ancient Portuguese document, the mortal remains of Saint Queen Ketavan were taken out from the Saint Augustine Convent of Old Goa. For a long time, it was believed that her remains buried in Goa were lost in the earthquake of 1550. After decades of tireless efforts, the Government of India and Georgia’s historians, researchers, archaeologists and the Georgian Church, the relics were successfully discovered in 2005. Keeping in mind their historical, religious and spiritual sentiments, the Government of India decided to gift a part of these relics to the people of Georgia. Today, we would like to thank the people of Goa for preserving this unique side of the shared history of India and Georgia. Goa has been the land of many a great spiritual heritage. Saint Augustine Church is a UNESCO’s World Heritage Site and it is a part of the Churches and Convents of Goa.

- My dear countrymen, let me now take you straight from Goa to Singapore, where another glorious opportunity arose earlier this July. The Prime Minister of Singapore Lee Hsien Loong inaugurated the recently renovated Siti Road Gurudwara. This Gurudwara was built about a hundred years ago and there is also a memorial dedicated to Bhai Maharaj Singh. Bhai Maharaj Singh ji fought for the Independence of India and this moment becomes more inspiring when we are celebrating 75 years of independence.

- There is such a moment which is very close to my heart. It is the topic of water conservation. Saving every drop of water, preventing every kind of wastage of water...it should become a natural part of our lifestyle. Our friends, the protection of nature and environment is embedded in the cultural life of India, in our daily lives. At the same time, rains and the monsoon have always shaped our thoughts and philosophy and our civilization. In ‘Ritusanara’ and ‘Meghdoot’, the great poet Kalidas has beautifully described the rains. These poems are still very popular among literature lovers. The magnificence of rains is also beautifully described in the ‘Parjanya Suktaam’ of Rigveda. Similarly, the relationship between the earth, the sun and the rain has been elaborated in a poetic form in the Srimad Bhagavata.

- My very best wishes to all of you for the forthcoming festivities. At the time of festivities and celebrations, you must remember that Corona has not yet gone from amongst you. You must not forget the protocols related to Corona. May all of you be healthy and happy.
