When India turns 75 on August 15, 2022, it will mark a moment which comes but rarely in history, when we step out from the old to the new. It will be the era of a New India; an era where India begins its journey to become a global leader in thought and action. The preparation towards this began in 2017 when Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi gave his vision call for establishing a New India by 2022. In line with this call, the NITI Aayog created the 'Strategy for New India @ 75' released in 2018. This strategy is still the more essential to transform the nation in the post-pandemic world.

The 'Strategy for New India @ 75' has three key messages from the Prime Minister for New India. First, development must become a mass movement, in which every Indian recognizes his/her role and also experiences the tangible benefits accruing to him/herself in the form of better quality of life. Second, development strategy should help achieve broad-based economic growth to ensure balanced development across all regions and States and across sectors. Third, the strategy, when implemented, will bridge the gap between public and private sector performance. The strategy is an attempt to bring innovation, technology, enterprises and efficient management together, at the core of policy formulation and implementation.

The term ‘policy’ is frequently used in government parlance, but what is a ‘policy’? In its simplest form, a policy is a framework or plan within which all actions, for the accomplishment of an objective are envisioned, implemented, and evaluated. Public policy, by extension, applies to the objectives that pertain to the welfare of the public. The science of policymaking is vast and varied, but like any science, it involves analytical thinking, systematic action, and objective evaluation. The life cycle of a policy can be seen in five distinct stages—Problem Identification, Policy Formulation, Policy Adoption, Policy Implementation, and Monitoring and Evaluation.

"Given the brisk pace of development in the world today, the development in New India is expected to be achieved sooner than envisioned. Therefore, the policy ecosystem of New India must not fall behind. It cannot be achieved solely by conventional methods; it requires a paradigm shift in the thought process, methods, and tools of the policymakers. For example, the conventional approach to policy is to encourage innovation and regulate technology as a goal of public welfare. While this is still required, it is imperative that policymakers change their perspective from considering innovation and technology as outcomes; considering it a tool to achieve their objectives. Similarly, the identified focus areas such as agriculture, industry, information and communication, infrastructure, logistics and transport, education and employment, health and wellness, local governance, etc. require either a sharper focus on implementing the flagship schemes already in place or a new design and initiative to achieve India's true potential. The following sections draw on the strategy and go a step further to describe how Innovation and Technology can play a role in those areas. In agriculture, emphasis must shift to converting farmers to ‘agripreneurs’. The e-National Agriculture Markets (e-NAMs) should be further expanded. A unified national market, coupled with opening up the export regime, can boost this sector. Automation through use of IoT (Internet of Things) technology and geospatial data in agriculture should be encouraged. This should start with mobile-based irrigation platforms and extend to precision agriculture that leverages sensor data from the plant, soil, water, and air, as well as geospatial data for crop and climate monitoring. Proactive dissemination of techniques on ‘Zero Budget Natural Farming’ (ZBNF) should be undertaken in low-income rural regions, so as to increase farmers’ income and improve land quality. In industry, the focus must be on encouraging adoption of Industry 4.0 in MSMEs. Small business research programmes for encouraging R&D in MSMEs need to be established. The support to micro innovations will create a culture of innovation across the workforce."

NEET EXAM-IMPORTANCE & BENEFITS

Being a doctor has always been considered a noble and honourable profession, but ever since COVID-19, doctors along with the nurses and other healthcare professionals working on the front lines, have become actual heroes. The public now sees these courageous men and women risking their lives for others while isolating themselves from their own families to do so.

World Health Organization says at least 1,15,000 health workers have now died from COVID-19. Such grim numbers have shocked both the public and the health workforce alike. There is no hard work, no life without levels of responsibility, and many stressful situations. No wonder, then, that medicine is regarded as a respected and lucrative career option by young professionals today.

Perhaps, there is no other career which commands such respect and awe as medicine. The power to heal has traditionally placed the medical field several rungs above other professions. And while it requires years of hard work and dedication study before you can see the light of day, the scope and prospects in the medical field have continuously attracted the brightest and the best.

Entry into the medical profession is tough and competitive, so as to select the most able and competent to deal with human life. The purpose of conducting entrance examinations is therefore to select candidates for admission to medical courses at diploma, degree, postgraduate, and research levels, and are held at the all-India level and state level.

Benefits of NEET

The benefit of being the only medical entrance examination in India is quite engaging. Here are some of the reasons:

- Common Entrance Test: With NEET being the only medical entrance examination in India, it prevents the private medical colleges from conducting any entrance examination of its own. NEET also prevents private universities from admitting students who do not qualify to pursue Medical.

The entrance exam helps the medical aspirants to pursue medical courses or MBBS from Abroad.

Equal Opportunity

Students who qualify NEET get the opportunity to securing a seat at any medical colleges in any State. Qualifying NEET with high scores and secure a good rank in the All-India merit list enable the students to get a seat in the most prestigious medical college of the country.

Uniform Admission

NEET exam was introduced to bring uniformity in the examination procedure to the medical colleges in India. The admissions to the medical universities are only accepted through NEET qualification. Some of the medical universities abroad offer MBBS seats to the medical aspirants after they qualify the NEET exam.

Saves time

The introduction of the NEET exam changes a lot in the medical entrance examination scenario. It saves the students’ time from appearing in multiple exams for the admission to the medical colleges of their choice.

BASIC INGREDIENTS FOR EXAM PREPARATION

- Persistence towards studies
- Dedication to preparation
- Clear repository towards your career and life ahead
- Smart work and clarity of basics of your study program

Following are the guidelines to help you prepare better for the medical entrance exams:

1. Have a long-term goal of finishing the syllabus till the exam date, but focus more on short-term goals. The syllabus is vast, take baby steps, don’t plan too much in advance. Plan for a day or a week. Set realistic targets for a week and check your progress at the end of the week.

2. Do not buy every book in town. Go through the NCERT books thoroughly, and refer to another 1 or 2 books, for each subject for the numerical aspect and to know a little more about a particular topic.

3. Focus more on clearing your fundamentals. Once you are clear about your concepts, only then move to the depths of a particular topic. In case you feel you do not understand a certain concept, do not hesitate to ask your friends or mentors. 12/2021

4. Prepare a Time Table. Adhere to it.

5. Keep a check on your progress by taking sectional tests. Sectional tests help you fine tune your preparation, help you manage time better and also help improve weak areas.

6. Keep revising whatever you do.

7. Read biographical paragraphs to famous doctors. If nothing else, it will tell you a little about what these people have done, what drives them and why they like what they do.

8. Do not put yourself under too much pressure. Take time out for yourself. Do something you love, develop a hobby and have fun while preparing.

COULD CLEAR THE NEET EXAM? HERE ARE FEW CAREER PATHS TO EXPLORE INSTEAD

What many of us do not know is that Medicine is only one amongst a hundred career options with equally good (or better) scope and opportunities. Many of these options are even related to Biology, Medicine and Science.

1. Look for Courses in Biology and Life Sciences
   - A lot of students get into the PCB stream because they like studying Biology but then get lured away by the charm of Medicine. With Medicine side-lined as an option, you can go on to explore your love for Biology, again. too in many different forms! From well-known fields like Botany, Zoology and Microbiology to upcoming ones like Marine Biology, Biochemistry and Genetics, the fields of Biology and the Life Sciences have a lot to offer.

   The biggest advantage for work in this field is Research and Development. With cutting-edge advances in research in the fields of health, medicine and even technology, competent researchers are very much in demand. There are many other jobs and professional opportunities available in different industries, depending upon the field in question.

   If you were a PCB student, then you can even look at inter-disciplinary fields in Biology, such as Biotechnology, Genetic Engineering, Biomedical Engineering, Biostatistics, etc. Since these are undergraduate degrees, you can even go on to pursue a variety of courses in Biology-Life Sciences, Health Management, Education, etc. for your post-graduation, giving you a diverse number of career options at hand.

2. The World of Allied Medicine
   - You do not have to be a doctor to fulfill your passion for medicine. The entire branch of Allied Medicine forms the backbone of the healthcare system. Professionals in these fields assist doctors in their work and make patient care, diagnosis and treatment possible. With career paths ranging from Optometry, Audiology and Physiotherapy to Medical Lab Technology, Nursing, Radio Technology and Clinical Research, there are a vast number of opportunities to explore. All of these fields have diverse types of work you will get to do.

3. Nursing
   - This year, the NEET UG 2021 exam can also be given to seek admission to B.Sc. Nursing courses across the country for the first time ever. Nursing is one of the strongest pillars that the medicine profession stands on. The profession revolves around taking care of people which includes their physical as well as psychological ailments. At a senior level, the work in the nursing department includes managing particular groups of patients from pediatrics ward, psychiatric ward, ICU, etc. Apart from that, the job involves taking care of the medication of the patients, maintaining patient records, administration, routine work, setting up of medical equipment and so much more. There are several career opportunities in nursing, not only in India but also abroad. With more and more nursing colleges opening up each day, aligned with the sign of the requirement of skilled and qualified people, room for growth is enormous.

Nursing is the right career option for those candidates who have the zeal and interest to serve the mankind. The person who believes in the curing of medically ill and can work in harsh conditions for long hours may choose the nursing as the career for themselves.

Women in Freedom Movement

The women of the Indian subcontinent were at the forefront of the struggle for freedom. They made significant contributions to the independence movement. Women in the Indian National Congress were actively involved in various activities, including organizing protests, distributing pamphlets, and raising funds for the war effort.

One of the key figures in the women's movement was Sarojini Naidu. She was a prominent poet and political leader who played a significant role in the Indian Freedom Movement. Naidu was the first woman to hold a cabinet position in India and was a member of the Indian National Congress. She was known for her oratory skills and her oratory skills and her ability to inspire and mobilize people.

Another important figure was Fatima Jinnah, who was the younger sister of Mohammad Ali Jinnah, the founder of Pakistan. Fatima Jinnah was an active supporter of the Muslim League and worked tirelessly to promote the cause of Pakistan.

Women also played a crucial role in mobilizing public opinion and organizing peaceful protests. They organized women's groups like the Women's League of India and the Women's Social and Political Union. These organizations helped to raise awareness about the cause of independence and mobilize support from the public.

Despite the challenges they faced, women continued to fight for their rights and the freedom of their country. Their contributions were instrumental in the success of the Indian Freedom Movement.

VISION FOR NEW INDIA @ 75

At the national scale, programmes on Smart and Advanced Manufacturing to address the shortage of high-tech human resources are needed. This also would facilitate the growth of high-value-added industries, leading up to rapid production through 3D printing.

In information and communication infrastructure, the BharatNet project is already underway with the goal of eliminating the digital divide. The challenges in implementation of Phase 2 and Phase 3, which will complete this last-mile connectivity to every part of the nation, can be met by encouraging use of advanced communication technologies like optical fibres, communication and fibre optic Space Optics. India’s active participation in formulating international standards must increase and expand. As a result of its recent efforts, the SGCI standard has been approved, which is designed specifically to serve rural and remote regions in developed countries.

In the broad sense of logistics and transport, the Bharatmala project must be given more dedicated corridors established. These projects should be implemented with new material technologies developed for construction.

The FASTag project is already being implemented, although some short-term remainders. Here, learning should be expanded to create an IT-enabled traffic management system in urban regions and to geospatial tracking and management for long-haul vehicles.

Coastal shipping and inland waterways infrastructure must also develop an IT-enabled platform. This is important for integrating different modes of transport and promoting multimodal and digitised mobility.

In education and employment, the implementation of the National Education Policy 2020 is underway. At the school education level, a flexibility in educational streams and vocational education, coupled with a new innovation ecosystem at the ground level by expanding the Atal Tinkering Labs project is needed. For higher education, there is a need to increase laboratory facilities and encourage canaline studies.

Access to education, clubbed with accelerated lab-to-market processes through Virtual Incubators, must be established. Similarly, re-skilling and up-skilling training through firms, or through unemployment assistance programs, must be offered. This will rapidly transform the workforce and offer social security.

In health and wellness, the affordable and available care in urban areas has been a huge push to improve workers’ living conditions and ensure equity. Looking forward, this can be clubbed with innovative construction technologies and integrated with a circular economy to provide a strong impetus to economic growth.

The establishment of a network of Health and Wellness Centres (HWCS) should be complemented with public health programmes through soft-touch governance, using targeted messaging and mobilizing the youth. Universal access to basic healthcare can be achieved rapidly through e-Health projects and telemedicine. The popularity of personal health and wellness technologies can be leveraged by supporting innovation in manufacturing of low-cost solutions.

In local governance, the emphasis must be placed on using and enabling technology. Spatial planning using GIS tools and land use monitoring using geospatial data increase the efficiency and productivity of the region. Ward committees and areas should be activated with a technology enabled ‘Open Cities Framework’ and the use of digital tools for feedback and reporting.

In addition, the Digital Village programme must be scaled up rapidly to encourage the use of information technology at the village level. This would include provision of citizen-centric services and increasing digital literacy through training. These changes can help achieve an engaged and active relationship between the government and the people.

In State and Central government, the emphasis must be placed on the implementing ‘Minimum Government, Maximum Governance’. A major overhaul of the various civil services is needed and must be based on a citizen-centric framework implemented through advanced ICT systems. Administrative reforms need to be designed in the changing context of emerging technologies and growing complexity of the economy. In addition, the scope of Swachh Bharat Mission may be expanded to cover initiatives for plastic waste, municipal and waste generating from wealth. This will create accessible and transparent governance.

The society today places a high value on innovative thinking primarily because it has been able to provide solutions to problems that conventional methods did not. The key insight here is that it is the utility of innovation, not the novelty, that makes it so desirable. The most important challenge for New India will be to establish Sustainable Development for a Sustainable Future.

In response to the clarion call by the Honorable Prime Minister of India, it is our Sunarkip that innovation and technology be leveraged consciously, to deliver a solution to this challenge for New India. This is the way the way toward health and beyond for New India 2025.

NEET AND OPTIONS BEYOND MEBs

4. Fields Associated with Biology

Biology being such a wide and diverse field, has applications in many areas, all of which are good options for you to consider. Why not help people get fit and maintain a healthy lifestyle by eating right? Careers in the domain of nutrition and fitness allow you to do that, with options such as becoming a Dietitian/Nutritionist, Fitness Trainer, Yoga Practitioner, etc. These are all lucrative options because people are increasingly becoming concerned with their health, leading to a sudden boom in the health and nutrition industry.

There are a number of career options to explore in the field of Agriculture, such as Horticulture, Dairy Technology, Agricultural Engineering, Fisheries Science, Agricultural Economics, and more. Contrary to the general notion, these are all in-demand fields and definitely do not involve farming! Yet another option related to Biology is Pharmacology. It is a great combination of science, healthcare, research, and technology.

5. Management Courses in Healthcare

Management with Medicine can be a brilliant combination. People in these fields manage the administration of hospitals, nursing homes, medical, pharmacy, personnel, finance, patient care services and other areas to ensure smooth functioning. Hospital Management and Hospital Administration are the two courses you can pursue to get into this field. Public Health Administration is another area that would give you the opportunity to work for the healthcare of the lower socio-economic strata of society through government health projects.

Although Hospital Management programmes are available mostly at the Master’s level (can be coupled with any other undergraduate course in Biology), you can find Public Health Administration courses at the undergraduate level too.

6. Mental Health Care

Doctors mostly cater to the physical well-being of people, but about their mental well-being? Clinical Psychology is the field where you work to understand why people suffer from mental health issues such as depression, anxiety, hallucinations, etc. Other related areas in psychology includes counselling psychology, health psychology, child psychology, neuropsychology, etc.

7. Legal Medical Advisor

Considered a lucrative career option after MBBS, a legal medical advisor is called for when special court cases need expert medical advice on some specific aspects. Many criminals require a medical expert’s opinion. Hence, this is truly a viable job option after MBBS. Long-running cases in courts make this profession extremely demanding at times.

With a plethora of options available instead of and after MBBS, PGM students now have versatile opportunities to take up what interest them. This way you can explore other options without clearing doors on Biology for the future.
