SARDAR PATEL
THE CHAMPION OF A UNITED INDIA

S.B. Singh

As India celebrates 'National Unity Day' on October 31, it is an opportune time to revisit the enduring contribution of Sardar Patel in the multi-dimensional task of nation-building post-partition and post-independence. The India we know today as a single geographical entity is the gift of Patel. When we say “from Kashmir to Kanyakumari, India is one,” we essentially pay tribute to Patel leading the arduous task of unifying India. If Gandhi lent his leadership to free India from foreign rule, Patel led its unification. Without a united India, we as a nation would have lost the whole meaning of Independence.

When the British left India, our leaders faced the task of cobbling up unity in a fragmented geography. The task to integrate 565 big and small princely states was an difficult one, requiring sagacity, firmness, and political skills of a high order. Patel was the man of the moment, and he indeed rose to the occasion. He was a natural choice to be made the first Home Minister of India, which allowed him to bolster India’s internal security and build a strong and united India. Patel was also Chairman of two important committees of the Constituent Assembly, viz. the Advisory Committee and the Provincial Constitution Committee. His credentials in leading peasants and crafting the Constitution of India were, thus, well established. It was clear in everyone’s mind that integration of princely states could be accomplished only by Patel, because he had earned a reputation for being decisive and dealing with any challenging situation with an “iron hand.” It is hard to imagine how the intractable princely states would have been unified as a single nation without a colossal leader like Patel. India was indeed fortunate to have a man cut out for the job, and he performed the job with surgical precision.

Different tasks: Different leaders

The making of a nation is not an individual project. It requires more than one to accomplish the complex task of building a nation on solid foundations. The first task i.e. securing Independence from British rule, was left to Gandhi. He led a powerful non-violent national movement against the British, finally compelling them to grant Independence and leave India to Indians. But then cropped up the issue of unifying the princely states, and Patel handled this with an iron hand. The third task was to build democratic institutions, modern industries, and align India well with the rest of the world through a rational foreign policy, a job for which Nehru was the chosen man.

CHALLENGES AND REWARDS OF ENTREPRENEURSHIP

Its (Indian Institutes of Technology) and IIFs (Indian Institutes of Management) are considered highly prestigious institutes in our country. Top companies offer many students from these institutes lucrative positions during the campus placement process. However, not every student is willing to take up such dream assignments, as many choose the path of entrepreneurship.

A regular job has its advantages. Your roles are defined, you get your salary month after month, and you work with a team comprising colleagues and others, which provides a social setting. Moreover, working with a prestigious organization adds to your social stature: you get promotions and rise in the hierarchy. Despite these perks, many people think differently, preferring to become entrepreneurs even though the path is laden with uncertainty and challenges.

In a job, even if you’re a great worker, your value is filtered through the perception of your superiors, your colleagues, and office culture, which may be good or bad. Even for the best performers, there is a limit to what they earn even though money is not the only criterion. People who prefer freedom and independence over job security and stable income have no qualms leaving their comfort zone and embracing entrepreneurship. For hard-working and committed people, there may be limitless opportunities in becoming an entrepreneur. Entrepreneurship is both challenging and fulfilling.

If we look around, we see that most people choosing entrepreneurship have not gone through formal education in the subject (of entrepreneurship). They do not consider it necessary to spend time on such a course and prefer to start straightaway.

Everyone thinking of becoming an entrepreneur has the choice of first studying the subject and then embarking on an endeavour or skipping the academic route and starting straightaway. However, those who are looking to join a course have ample options.

A general MBA or Postgraduate Diploma in Management can provide you with enough inputs to start your venture. The objective of such a course is to equip people to own and run an enterprise. Courses with a specific focus on Entrepreneurship are also available in different forms.

A comprehensive course will cover the following:-
Basics of entrepreneurship,

We have achieved Swaraj, and if we do not in time reap the fruits of Swaraj, India is now free and independent and yet India is not in a position to enjoy the fruits of freedom.

I confidently hope that in the next five years the whole face of the Union would be changed. To make the country prosperous you should all sink your differences and work hard. There is no more room for any agitation or mischief but only for hard work.

Violence must be given up. In unity there is strength and prosperity. Today the people of Orissa are agitated about the Rulers. But who are the Rulers? There could be Rulers only if the people recognised them as such. The Rulers must move with the times. They should cease to be frogs in the wells. These are the days of democracy. The Rulers must put their trust in the people.

There must be total elimination of violence, for the forces of law and order are there to deal with any anti-social elements. You must all work hard to make the country prosperous and well-governed. Follow the lead of Mahatma Gandhi by eradicating untouchability and fostering inter-communal unity.

(Address in Cuttack on October 28, 1947 after the Government received information of disturbances in Orissa and neighbouring States)

'It should be obvious to everyone, however, that even system of government, both democraticization and integration are clearly and unmistakably indicated.

"In the world of today where distances are on the shrinking and masses are being gradually brought into contact with latest administrative amenities, it is impossible to postpone for a day longer that necessary the introduction of measures which would make the people realize that their progress is also proceeding at last on the lines of their neighbouring areas. Delays inevitably lead to disaster, which in its turn results in lawlessness, the use of force may for a time check the popular urge for reform but it cannot never succeed in bringing the States with which it had to our due share of troubles and turmoils. We are lucky to have survived so many of them, but many are still to be overcome. If we fail or fall, we shall consign ourselves to eternal shame and disgrace.

"I want you to realize the full gravity of the situation and to consider the position in the light of the legacy which we have inherited. Did anyone dream a year or two ago that one-third of India would be integrated in this fashion? This is the first time in history after centuries that India can call itself an integrated whole in the real sense of the term. But we must all realize that whatever mistakes we might commit, we should do nothing which would be calculated to prejudice the cause of the generations of the past. It is, therefore, the duty of India's valiant sons to see that the clocks of progress are not put back, but advance forward. We must also realize that if we have to take our due place in the country of nations it will not come to us for the asking, but we shall have to strain every nerve for it.

"It is almost a year since the country attained freedom. No country has suffered so much within the first year of its birth as India has. Eastern Punjab States and Patiala occupy a strategic position in the new circumstances of the country. The responsibility of the Rulers and the people of the area is greater than that of any other part of the Union. That responsibility is increased manifold if we consider that we have a neighbour with whom our relations are not of friendliness, trust and confidence. In these circumstances, the responsibility of the border people is greater and, therefore, our duty is heavier. I harbour no ill-will nor do I wish to hurt anyone. My only desire is that India should be well protected and that it should be for every Indian to see that there are no loopholes or weak links in the whole system of security, both external and internal. In my efforts to achieve this the Rulers have helped me a lot. It is now for the people to extend their helping hand to me. Time is of the essence. We have to move quickly and unless we do so, we have a big stake to lose."

"To rule by one's will alone is easy; to rule by consent and jointly is a difficult task. It is for this reason that we all must tread the ground cautiously... Swaraj involves learning by experience. That is prohibitively costly but we have to ensure that the cost is not disproportionately high and serious mistakes are prevented. It is not wise or practical politics to rush headlong into experiments and decisions of doubtful wisdom. The position is such that every must take care. Mistakes can be tolerated elsewhere where administration is set on an even key, but where the foundations have not been well and properly democracy and democratic institutions can function efficiently only where the unit to which these are applied can subsist in a sub-autonomous existence. Where, on account of smallness of its size, isolation of its situation, the inseparable link with a neighbouring autonomous territory, be it a Province or a bigger State, in practically all economic matters of everyday life, the inadequacy of resources to open up its economic potentialities, the backwardness of its people and the sheer incapacity to shoulder a self-contained administration, a State is unable to afford a modern

SARDAR PATEL: THE CHAMPION OF A UNITED INDIA

Once Independence was achieved, the task of nation-building had to begin without any delay because the partition had left a deep scar on the country. The princely states, for a variety of reasons, could not be given the choice of remaining separate entities. The existence of princely states had several implications. One, India's geography would become discontinuous interspersed with pockets of small princely states. Two, there was a genuine security concern emanating from these princely states in view of the fact that anti-India activities could be planned and carried out from these states. Three, the building of crucial infrastructure like railways, roads, dams, etc. would be difficult with princely states existing as separate entities. With Patel around, this indeed was not going to happen, and either through negotiations and persuasions or, if need be, by force, princely states had to be integrated with India. The details of integration of princely states are narrated in the book "The Story of Integration of Princely States" by V.P. Menon, secretary to Patel in the then 'States Department' to deal with princely states.

Congress and the princely states

We must briefly understand both British as well as Congress policy towards princely states. Before 1857, the British were quite hostile towards the princely states. In order to expand the British Empire in India, they ruthlessly annexed princely states or made them sign the infamous Subsidiary Alliance, whereby the princely states would come under the de facto rule of the British. However, this hostile attitude changed post-1857, and the princely states were made "Subordinate Partners" of the British provided they accepted British para-military. This paramilitary did not allow the rulers of the princely states to take independent decisions on external matters. However, the British announced lapse of their para-military over the princely states under the "Indian Independence Act" on 18th July, 1947. This gave three options to the princely states, one, they could join India, two, they could join Pakistan, and three, they could remain independent. Much before this, Congress had also taken its stand on the issue of princely states. Initially reluctant to fight the cause of the people of princely states, turning it as a non- communal riot, and Indian troops took control of Hyderabad. A remarkable display of wisdom and willpower by Patel unified India like never before. Contiguous geography was the need of the hour to define every inch of territory as Indian territory, and that was completely fulfilled under Patel's leadership.

Administrative unification of India

Patel was not satisfied only with the geographical unification of the newly emerging princely states. As a great administrator himself, he overruled Nehru to create the famed All India Services to earn the sobriquet of the "Father of All India services." Nehru was skeptical of a state of All India Service given his experience of the ICS (Indian Civil Service). But Patel stood his ground and had his way. He created a robust and merit-based cadre of All India Services to serve the entire Union as well as the State governments. In defense of All India Services, he said, "There is no alternative to this administrative system... The Union will go if you do not have good All India Services... Remove them, and I see only a picture of chaos all over the country." No wonder then that Civil Service Day is celebrated on 21st April to commemorate Patel's address to the civil servants. Despite all odds, Patel had moved the All India Service, a task which no one else would have taken on. Patel's administrative unification of India had been performed the task of national integration as envisaged by Patel. It not only looks after law and order but is deeply engaged in the democratic institutions and has performed the constitutional and developmental tasks in modern India.

The flame of national unity was ignited by Sardar Patel. Heading the Home department and being the first Deputy Prime Minister of India, Patel left his mark well in all his actions. To contextualize Patel and his farsightedness, national unity remains the prime goal of the Indian national project. A unified India is what Sardar Patel gifted to us. But it can not be taken for granted. National unity is being challenged by forces of communalism, separatism, and regional parochialism. To take his vision forward, we need to carry his legacy by imbuing the values that guided him. For that, our political and social leaders need to rise above self-interest to build a plural India, which is still a work in progress. A true tribute to Sardar Patel will promote the cause close to his heart... a unified India.

Characteristics of an Entrepreneur: When one applies for a job, employers judge a candidate's suitability for the given role. For gauging the suitability of a candidate, a written test, interview, group discussion, and other exercises are conducted. In the same way, before one decides to become an entrepreneur, one should do some self-evaluation. Entrepreneurship is very different from being an employee in a company. At least, in the beginning, the days are challenging and demanding. The initial challenges should not deter you. You will come across many problems but remember, every situation has a solution. You may have to work extra hours and do a variety of tasks. Few things may not move in the desired way, but instead of getting disappointed, you have to review and do what is best possible in the given situation.

Described below are some common traits of a successful entrepreneur:

Ability to take risks: One may be well prepared, but starting any business involves considerable risk. The courage and capacity to endure and face these risks are essential for any entrepreneur.

Open-mindedness: You may come across people who do not think your way in a few situations, the reality will be different than what you had expected. You should be open and understanding towards such cases and use these to broaden your perspective.

Visionary: The term visionary is used for many great personalities like J R D Tata, M Visvesvaraya, etc. Reaching their level may not be possible for everyone, but the idea that you should think long-term and see the big picture. Even though you start small, but you should strive for continuous growth.

Innovative: For an entrepreneur, innovation matters a lot. Innovating means coming up with new ideas, which can be put to practical use for competitive advantage. Innovation can happen with experimenting and exploring. Some examples of innovation are product innovation, profit innovation, process innovation, and cost innovation.

Leadership: Leadership itself is a combination of many qualities. In the case of entrepreneurship, you need to have courage, initiative, and self-motivation with a clear focus. Leadership qualities can be developed by observing great personalities and reading about their lives. The leadership being talked about here is much different from political leadership.

Self-confidence: The simple truth is that others will trust you only when you trust yourself. You should have the confidence to make your own decisions with the required bravery. Working on increasing your capabilities and believing in your abilities will boost your self-confidence.

Steps involved in Entrepreneurship: Once you have decided to become an entrepreneur, you will be required to plan meticulously and follow the steps one by one. The preliminary step is to decide the area in which you would like to work. There are two approaches to that. There are people who like some activity and then try to start an entrepreneurial venture involving that particular activity. For example, somebody may have a concern for environment protection and may take up some particular revenue generating activity related to that. The other approach is to explore opportunities, evaluate options and then come to a conclusion about the venture to be undertaken. Whichever way one decides, gathering information about the market opportunities, business potential, financial requirements, and regulatory issues is a must. Then comes location. Many activities can be started from home whereas some may have a different location requirement particularly where production

The Nobel Prize in Literature for 2021 has been awarded to the novelist Abdulrazak Gurnah "for his uncompromising and compassionate penetration of the effects of colonialism and the fate of the refugee in the gulf between cultures and continents." Gurnah was born in 1948 and grew up on the island of Zanzibar in the Indian Ocean but arrived in England as a refugee in the end of the 1960s. He has published ten novels and a number of short stories. The theme of the refugee's disruption runs throughout his work.

An ingenious tool for building molecules
Building molecules is a difficult art. Benjamin List and David MacMillan have been awarded the Nobel Prize in Chemistry 2021 for their development of a precise new tool for molecular construction: organocatalysis. This has had a great impact on pharmaceutical research, and has made chemistry greener.

Physical Medicine

Innovative receptors for temperature and touch
This year's medicine prize has been awarded to David Julius and Ardem Patapoulan. Their discoveries have unlocked one of the secrets of nature by explaining the molecular basis for sensing heat, cold and mechanical force, which is fundamental for our ability to feel, interact and interact with our internal and external environment.

Nobel Prize facts

On 27 November 1895, Alfred Nobel signed his last will and testament, giving the largest share of his fortune to a series of prizes in physics, chemistry, physiology or medicine, literature and peace - the Nobel Prizes. In 1968, Sveriges Riksbank (Sweden's central bank) established The Sveriges Riksbank Prize in Economic Sciences in Memory of Alfred Nobel.

Cabinet nod sets PM GatiShakti NMP in motion

The Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs (CCEA) has approved the PM GatiShakti National Master Plan (NMP), including the institutional framework, implementation, monitoring, and support mechanism for multi-modal connectivity. The PM GatiShakti NMP was launched by the honorable Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi on 13th October 2021. With the Cabinet nod, momentum has been set for the rollout of the holistic and integrated planning framework for infrastructure development across the country by integrating different modes of transportation. The plan is set to be a game-changer in inter-ministerial and inter-departmental cooperation in infrastructure planning, signaling a paradigm shift in the approach to infrastructure development planning. It will ensure maximum utilization of resources and capacities, enhancing efficiency and reducing wastage.

The implementation framework approved by the cabinet includes an Empowered Group of Secretaries (EGOS), Network Planning Group (NPG), and Technical Support Unit (TSU), having the required technical competencies. The Cabinet Secretary will head the EGOS that will comprise Secretaries of 18 ministries as members, and the head of Logistics Division as Member Convener. The EGOS will review and monitor the implementation of the plan to ensure logistics efficiency. It is empowered to prescribe framework and norms for undertaking any subsequent amendments to the NMP. The EGOS will also set out the procedures and definitive framework for synchronization of various activities and ensure that infrastructure development initiatives are part of the standard integrated digital platform. The EGOS will also look at the interventions required for efficiently transporting bulk goods required by various ministries like Steel, Coal, Fertilizer, etc.

The CCEA has also approved the formation, composition, and terms of reference for Network Planning Group (NPG) consisting of heads of the Network Planning wing of respective infrastructure ministries and it will assist the EGOS. The Technical Support Unit (TSU) will provide the required competencies in enhancing optimization to avoid duplication of works for holistic development of any region, reducing logistics costs through micro-plan detailing, given the complexities involved in the overall integration of networks. The TSU will have domain experts from various infrastructure sectors as Aviation, Maritime, Public Transport, Rail, Roads & Highways, Ports, etc. and Subject Matter Experts (SMEs) in Urban & Transport Planning, Structures (Roads, Bridges & Buildings), Power, Pipeline, GIS, ICT, Finance/Market PPP, logistics, Data Analytics, etc.

The PM GatiShakti NMP intends to break departmental silos and bring in more holistic and integrated planning and execution of projects to address multi-modal and last mile connectivity issues, bringing down the logistics cost. The initiative will translate into enormous economic gains to consumers, farmers, youth, and those engaged in businesses.

India has expressed its strong opposition to China’s Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) and its flagship project, the China Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) at the second UN Global Sustainable Transport Conference in Beijing. Priyanka Sohoni, the First Secretary at the Indian Embassy in Beijing, highlighted New Delhi’s objection to the controversial projects during her speech at the conference hosted by China in Beijing from 14th to 16th October under the aegis of the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA). Sohoni said the CPEC project impinges on India’s sovereignty, and no country can support an initiative that ignores core concerns of sovereignty and territorial integrity. “We are of the firm belief that connectivity initiatives must be based on universally recognized international norms. They must follow principles of openness, transparency, and financial responsibility,” Sohoni said.

NASA launches first space mission to study Trojan Asteroids
NASA has launched the Lucy space-craft, the first space mission to study the Trojan Asteroids. Lucy will journey for 12 years, observing one main-belt asteroid and seven Trojan asteroids. The swarms of Trojan asteroids associated with Jupiter are thought to be remnants of the primordial material that formed the outer planets. These primitive bodies hold vital clues to deciphering the history of the solar system. The Jupiter Trojan asteroids are captured in an orbit outside the main belt of asteroids in our Solar System's giant planets (Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune) over 4.5 billion years ago. Lucy will give us insights into the dynamic and physical processes that affected these planetary building blocks and will help us untangle the Solar System's early history at the time when planet formation was ending, and the planets were moving into the orbital configuration we see today.
